SECTION EDITORS: GEEN HONG MUI & ASTA PEDERSON

When asked about Northwestern's theme, "Go Deeper," Junior Andrea Dollerschell replied with the mindset of a dedicated Resident Assistant: "All I wanted for the girls on my hall is that they would grow. I wanted them to be different people when they left from whom they were when they came: academically and spiritually. It's all about allowing the Holy Spirit to challenge you." Likewise, the goal for Northwestern as a whole is to go deeper in all aspects of life, whether it is in the classroom, day-to-day ministry, or student life here on campus.

Actions Go Deeper Than Words: The Mission Of Love

A Bonding Mission

Natives living in the garbage dump gathered around the Northwestern team for a picture right before the team left Ecuador.

Ready Or Not

Junior Kristin Hall (center) is pulled from the audience to join the children in a drama. The play was performed at an orphanage in Hradeckralove, Czech Republic.

Over the past summer, students took mission trips to Ecuador, Trinidad, the Czech Republic, and Poland. Students found the experience to be truly memorable and they learned lessons that could never be learned through anything else. Running camps for missionary kids, doing construction labor, and learning more about the culture were a few of the experiences had during those trips. Sophomore Holly Connor on the Trinidad mission trip said, "God taught me how to fully trust in Him...and rely on Him for everything." Showing God's love through helping was definitely the main goal for these trips.

Paint-A-Thon

On a hot day in Ecuador, Junior Nicole O'Byrne stretches across the roof top to paint a home for the elderly with Junior Ginny Becker.

Orientation 2001

A Deeper Look Into The Future

Reaching Deeper

During orientation week, Freshman Joshua Kuss makes a run in the basketball bungee to get the most balls in the hoop. There he goes and scores!

A Sweet Treat

Lending A Hand

For the student service project, the Eagle Pride team helped strip and repaint the doors of the rehabilitation center for the homeless.

Sign In, Please

On the first day of arrival for orientation, freshman Joelle Knappen signs a housing agreement required for every student living on campus, with the help of Resident Director Amy VanDerWerf.

FAR RIGHT: Who's Under the Beards?

Northwestern's version of the Soggy Bottom Boys started off the show with the song "Man of Constant Sorrow."

RIGHT: Little Drummer Boy

Chris Taylor, sophomore, displayed his talent while playing the drum.

BELOW: A Little Pop Culture

Fall Variety Show

The evening of November 10th was "everybody's birthday," and Northwestern students showed off their talents to celebrate the occasion.

And Now, from the Hosts of the Show...

"The audience got an opportunity to experience God in a laughing matter because that is a part of who God is. People enjoyed the quality of talents. We really enjoyed acting as hosts for this year's event. The question is, "Where did they get these people from?"

Junior Ginny Becker
Variety Show Co-host

Senior Jon Dierenfeld
Variety Show Co-host

LEFT: Breaking the Bonds of Sin

Second place went to a group doing a human video for the song "This Is How It Feels to be Free." They broke bricks and chains to show that life in Jesus is the only way to be free from the sins of the world.

BELOW: Fun for All

The emcees for the evening, Ginny Becker and Jon Dierenfeld, made sure the audience had a good time between performers. They took everyone back to the time they were five years old, and Jon even made an appearance as Father Abraham.

Receiving third place was junior Shaun Thompson for his original composition "Pete, My Pet Piranha."

Homecoming Week 2001

"Now is the Time"

Eagles Score Another Win

The highlight of Homecoming Week was the football game against the Martin Luther College Knights. The Knights put up a good fight, but nothing could stop the NWC Eagles as they steamrolled their way to a 38-6 victory.

World's Largest Ice Cream Sundae

One of the fun events for students during Homecoming Week was the ice cream feed. Everyone met on Maranatha Lawn where four rain gutters (lined with tin foil for sanitary reasons, of course) served as the "troughs" for ice cream and toppings.

Eagle Pride

Our eagle mascot kept the crowd fired up and entertained with his antics during the Homecoming football game. He also made an appearance to cheer on the girls' powderpuff teams.

Another M & M?

Junior Ben Hemmila, NWSA president, gets into his announcement of this year's M & M Northwestern representatives by dressing as (what else?) an M & M candy.

Open Wide!

Representatives from each class participated in the goldfish-eating contest during the pep rally in the Riley gym. The sophomores apparently were the hungriest, as they won this contest hands-down.

Quality Control?

Senior Rob Wedin decides to stop filling gutters with ice cream long enough to get a taste for himself.

Leading the Parade into the Future

Homecoming is more...

Ticket in bucket. Ticket in bucket.

Junior Amanda Rumsey seems concerned that she made the wrong choice concerning her participation ticket's fate. During Homecoming Week, students were given points for participating in different events around campus. Everyone was instructed to put their "ticket in the bucket" that corresponded with their class.

Play by play of the game.

Interviewing the sophomore quarterback, Lindsey Bordes, about her sneaky plays planned against the seniors is junior Steve Gibbs. The sophomore team practiced in advance of the game and had their plays memorized. They played a tough game, but lost their first game against the seniors in overtime.

Not in my car!

Freshman Kristen Eschenbacher gets more whipped cream than she bargained for at the ice cream feed on Maranatha lawn.

"Please don't drop me, girls."

Senior Elizabeth Holden, M & M Northwestern, dons a uniform and helps the cheerleaders out during the pep rally.

...than just the men's football game

Soccer Mania

The men's soccer team took to the field right after the Homecoming football game and played Crown College. Northwestern won the game 3 to 2 in overtime.

The REAL M & M of Northwestern

Junior Kory Capps and senior Elizabeth Holden were chosen by their fellow students to represent the school as Mr. and Miss Northwestern this year.

Football with a Feminine Flair

The ladies of Northwestern show their guts as they play Powderpuff Football. It was another war among classes and this time the senior girls came out on top of the pile. Not literally, however, since the game was played with flags, not tackling.

"I Stand in Awe"

During the pep rally, the Improv Group entertained the crowd with humorous skits like the "Emotion Game." Here, sophomores Laura Den Hartog and Mike Larson portray awe (perhaps in response to NWC's remarkable football team?).

Moyer Music Themes...

Ladies, Let The Party Begin!

Welcome to Hicksville

Enthusiastic sophomore Laura Den Hartog greets her guests with more than a smile.

Go Girl Go

The girls of Quad 5 bring on the cheers in the hula hoop contest.

Love My Lashes

And the prize goes to sophomores Heather Hauan and Lauren Becker for the longest lashes and bluest fashions.

Kiss-Me Quick Booth

Who's that under the mask? Why it is sophomore Katie Seefeldt getting a peck from the Dean of Residence Life, Paul Bradley.

Cheers To You

Sophomore Jessica Charles and junior Laura Knock cater to your needs with German Polka in Quad 12.

How Deep Can You Go?

Freshman Billy Bergman sinks his face into the bobbing apples while freshmen Tim Junker and Luke Albertson stare in awe.

O How Sweet Thy Song

Director of Church Relations Larry Medcalfe and his wife, Gayle, lead in the singing of "Rudolf the Red Nose Reindeer".

Above: T'was The Night Before Christmas...

All ready for Christmas, freshman Leah Eliason shakes the present like a little child anticipating Christmas morning.

Top: Chill Out Cafe

In the midst of the busy school week, students find time to just hang out and listen to the band, Acoustic Sunset. The Acoustic Sunset members shown are Mike Hadley and seniors Jesse GrothOlson, and Jon Henderson.

Above: Welcome Inn

The ski lodge greeters freshmen Bethany Schultz and Rachel Wilkinson were more than just enthusiastic employees full of the Christmas spirit.

SNODAZE

Despite the fact that the temperature reached fifty degrees (above zero) and there wasn't actually any snow on the ground, Northwestern students still took time to celebrate SnoDaze the week of February 11-15. The week started with the crowning of John Gaede and Elizabeth Hunnicutt as Snoman and Snowoman. The "Royal Sno-couple" gave SnoDaze-related announcements in chapel all week, including daily clues for this year's version of the Medallion Hunt. Since there was no snow under which to hide a medallion, the name of the hunt was changed to "Where in the World Is Dr. Cureton?" The object of the game was not to simply be the first one to spot Northwestern's new president, but instead to use the clues to find the nameplate from his door. By the end of the week, sophomore Tyler Synsteliien was declared the winner for discovering the nameplate, which was hidden in the chapel on the island. During SnoDaze, students also participated in the annual Twister Tournament in Riley Gym, broomball games on the lake, and the coffeeshouse on Valentine's Day.

Did you say SnoDaze?

Above: Students took advantage of the nice weather during SnoDaze because they knew the sunny days would turn into cold, blustery ones by the beginning of the next week.

The Rule of the Redheads

Right: Junior John Gaede and senior Elizabeth Hunnicutt were elected to be this year's Snoman and Snowoman. NWSA spokeswoman Lindsay Anderson made the comment that maybe the title should have been "Brown-grass Man and Woman" because of the lack of snow.

Twister-Tied

Fun on the Ice

Northwestern responds to September 11, 2001

On September 11, 2001, the United States suffered a terrorist attack when four commercial airliners were hijacked and steered to deface some of the nation's strongest symbols of economic power, national defense, and social freedom. Two airliners managed to destroy the World Trade Center towers in New York City, one caused damage to the Pentagon, and the fourth is believed to have been headed for the capitol but was courageously overtaken by passengers and crashed in Pennsylvania.

Northwestern College was not immune to the aftermath of the attack. Many mourned for the lost while trying to figure out why the United States had sustained such a blow. Though answers were hard to come by, steps to recovery soon followed.

Flags were flown at half-mast across the nation for ten days as a poignant reminder of what the nation had suffered. Blood drives were immediately opened around the nation, donations were taken for the New York police and fire department as well as for families that lost loved ones in the attack, and the nation united in prayer for the devastation that had taken place.

Sarah Wohlhuter, a senior at Northwestern, said, "I've always been afraid to give blood, but I feel like it's something I need to do. It's the least I can do."

President George W. Bush called for a national day of prayer on September 14th, the Friday following the attack. For an hour at noon that day, classes at Northwestern were postponed and students joined in Maranatha Hall to answer this call to prayer.

As the days following the attack passed, a spirit of national pride grew. Ribbons were sold outside Nazareth cafeteria to be worn in remembrance of those lost while the proceeds went to help the recovery effort that now lay ahead in New York and Washington, D.C. Junior Lindsey Anderson was seen adorned with ten of these ribbons and said, "It's just a way I can help and show that I will remember."

Though the reverberations of the shock could be felt throughout the year, Northwestern College, along with the nation, refused to give up hope and continued to pull together during this time of need.

In his national address the night of September the 11th, President Bush said plainly what could be felt across America: "The resolve of our great nation is being tested and, make no mistake, we will pass the test."

Story by Janelle Palmer, Senior

BELOW: Coming Together in Prayer

Many Northwestern students took part in a huge prayer rally at the Minneapolis Metrodome soon after the terrorist attacks.

Symbol of Freedom

Soon after the terrorist attacks on September 11, Northwestern's rock was painted in a patriotic fashion to encourage everyone on campus.

The Edge:

Digging Deeper into Praise and Worship

The Edge is a student-led praise and worship time on Wednesday evenings with a spiritual message given later in the service. Speakers include current students, alumni, and those who have given chapel messages, such as Marilyn Laszlo and David Pierce. Senior Ricky Frith, who has led worship for the past few years, held auditions for students who wanted to be a part of the worship team or part of the planning.

The Edge is a time for students to come together, leave behind their studies, worship with their peers, and hear what God has laid on the speaker's heart.

THOUGHTS ON THE EDGE

To Me The Edge Is...

"A great time during the week to just stop and have a praise & worship time."
-Anne Rahn, senior

"An oasis of praise in the midst of the stressful week."
-Emily Carlson, freshman

"A break time for more worship and to hear more from the speakers."
-Joshua Cox, sophomore

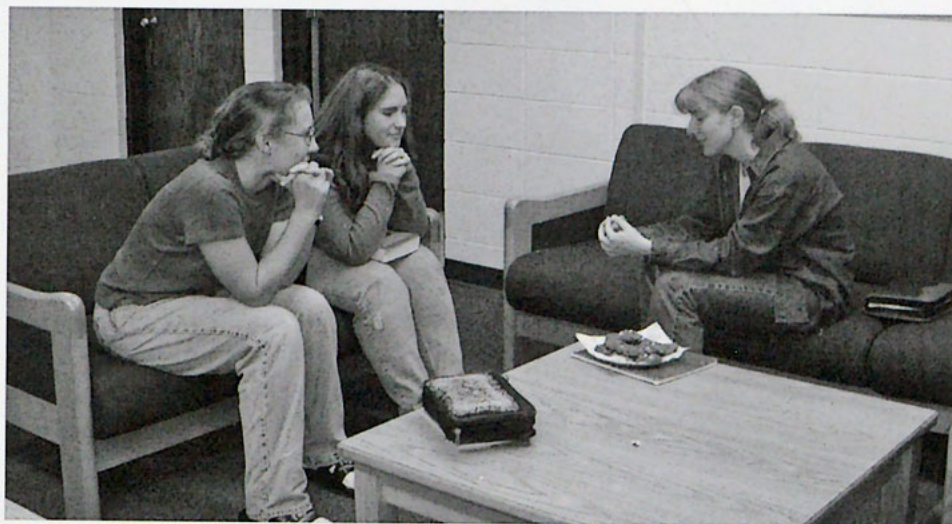

"A chance to worship with my fellow believers."
-Jessica Reed, sophomore

"A great opportunity to be challenged, to grow in your faith."
-Eric Flaa, sophomore

"A place where you can learn more about God and the importance of being involved with the school's spiritual environment. When the stress is on and I am buried in homework that is when I know I need to give God more of my time by going to the Edge."
-Chris O'Hara, sophomore

Academics

"Knowing that what we are learning will be applicable to my ministry is encouraging, I want to use teaching as a method of conveying my love of learning and my joy in Christ to my students," states Emily Slinger, senior English Education major. All the academic programs at Northwestern not only prepare students for a career, but for ministry as well. The professors here are well-acquainted with what is required to "Go Deeper" with excellence.

ART & GRAPHIC DESIGN

ONE-ON-ONE INSTRUCTION. Senior Lisa VonDeLinde listens as Professor Martha Ensign Johnson explains the printmaking lab assignment.

THE TEACHER AND THE TAUGHT.

Joe Smith consults with his students about their work; always encouraging them with a bright smile. If he doesn't, they can remind him of their most memorable moment with him. On a recent canoe trip, this professor took a turn for the lake with a big splash, truly experiencing God's divine creation of lake water and mud.

CLEANING UP. Junior Ali Baden washes her hands after printmaking class.

PSYCHOLOGY & COMMUNICATIONS

THE LEGEND. Don Johnson, voted NWC's funniest professor, stops for one quick second for a picture. Yes, we were able to get him to sit still for the moment of the flash; however, much of this visit was spent fighting with his friend, Bethel Bob, on the right.

ARE YOU WITH ME? The Interpersonal Psychology students enjoy a little class time together. Some smile for a picture, while the others are still interested in this lecture.

COMMUNICATING THROUGH PRINT. The Column staff smiles for a picture while working on the newspaper. It's hard work, but somebody has to do it.

SCIENCE & MATHEMATICS

Studying is a treat!

We found freshman Mimis Martinez in the candy isle of Walgreens studying for her biology exam.

In a recent survey:

Where's your favorite place to study?

"I never study in the library...my room and the end lounges are so much more comfortable."

~Julie Pearson, freshman

"I force myself in the library, otherwise I find someone to talk to." ~Ted Sibley, sophomore

"I am going to be really bummed when the lake is frozen and we can't use the canoes anymore."

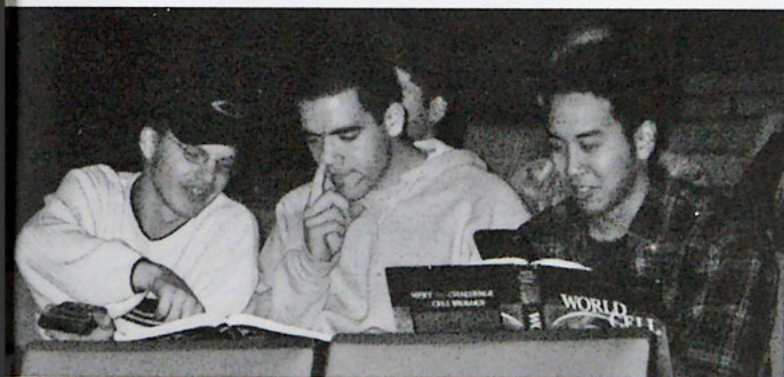

~Mimis Martinez, Freshman

"When I am forced to, I guess I like the library. Our room is just too crazy!" ~Asta Pederson, freshman

"Girlz in the Hood"...

Professor Simat and his persuasive excitement got sophomore Sarah Sawyer and freshmen Mimis Martinez and Jen Ressie to get in the biology lab "hood" to experiment at their own risk! Warning: Do not proceed in this experiment without the professor. Without his reassuring words you are guaranteed to keep a straight face and not have as much fun!

Go Deeper!

Sophomores Jon Hanson and Troy Roberts, and junior Zen Matsuda get a quick study session in between chapel and class. Sure looks like Troy is going deeper!

Sleeping Beauty.

Sophomore Megan Nyffeler is in a deep sleep here on one of those comfy couches in Naz. Ah, biology can wait... just for a few minutes. I have a better idea, if you dream about the electron transport system, then you can get both things done at once.

Have you seen our buns?

Someone should have reminded Professor Simat to remember the buns, condiments, and utensils for the cookout.

She made me do it!

Freshmen Julie Pearson and Nick Jackson pose for a quick picture before Biology class. Nick's only comment was... "Don't tell my mom! My parents really hate it when I do that."

ENGLISH & LITERATURE

They just can't put it down.
Engrossed in reading the most recent edition of Inkstone are juniors Angela Manthei and Pamela Thomas.

Inkstone

Inkstone, the literary arts magazine published by Northwestern's English department, gives current students a chance to submit poetry, short stories, personal essays, and two-dimensional artwork for its biannual release.

Unlike other student publications on campus, such as the Column or the Scroll, Inkstone is a literary publication and features creative writing. No other student publication prints creative writing at Northwestern. "Inkstone helps Northwestern become aware of the talents we have here on campus," said Danielle Hibma, associate editor of Inkstone.

Students from every department are encouraged to enter their writing. "We want all majors to be involved in Inkstone because there is a lot of good writing going on," said Judy Hougen, advisor of Inkstone. "Inkstone provides a forum to celebrate all of the good student writing that is going on here. Musicians have recitals to celebrate their good work, artists have art shows to display their good work, and we (the English department) have Inkstone to celebrate our good work," she said.

Story by: Heather Thompson, senior

Artistic Expression...

HISTORY

Dynamic Duo

Charles Aling (right) and Clyde Billington (left) are the dynamic duo of the History department. The stories that they share during classes have ranged from childhood memories of fighting bullies over a gallon of milk to "purple passions" (anyone from Aling's class knows what that is all about!).

One of Aling's distinct classroom qualities is that "he talks fast," according to Sharron Moore, a senior social studies education major. Trying to take notes in an "Aling class" is challenging because students find it hard to keep up with his fast-paced lectures.

Billington is one of the best-dressed men on campus. While he is quite classy nowadays, Billington grew up in a rough household. He brings stories from his difficult life into the classroom, and students can always find a grain of wisdom (and often humor) in his anecdotes.

MODERN LANGUAGES

Toreadora

Bulls are attracted to movement, not color," said senior Kari Heebink. During her study trip to Spain, Heebink had the opportunity to learn how to fight a bull (below) among other unique cultural experiences. My nickname became "Toreadora," she said, which is Spanish for 'bull fighter.'"

"The easiest job on campus"

Being the language lab attendant has its perks. The quiet, secluded room on fourth floor Naz forces attendants to do homework (and get paid for it). Another activity option is to invite a friend to help watch over the rows and rows of empty listening stations.

BUSINESS

Protocol Dinner: Dining Do's and Don'ts

*DO look into, not over, your cup or glass when drinking.

*DO remember your posture at the table. Sit up straight, and keep your arms (including elbows) off the table.

*DON'T saw the meat in a back and forth motion; stroke it toward you.

*DON'T, under any circumstances, put the knife in your mouth.

Left: The business of eating. Senior business majors Nate Keane, Ben Selness, and Tony Rice expertly position their dessert forks as they devour a dainty bite of cheesecake.

Top: Business majors shake it up. Freshman Blue Room server Becky Elmstrand stands by while senior business majors Sarah Miller, Andrea Ledbetter, Beth Soderstrom, and Ben Selness practice their most important business asset—the handshake. Berva taught that the perfect handshake was web to web, firm, and warm (but not sweaty). She emphasized that professionals should rise to greet others with good eye contact, a smile, and a perfect handshake.

Right: Million dollar smiles...Seniors Angela Brasser, Jeff Burmeister, David Caneday, Peter Morrow, Mirka Tomczyk, Katie Bain, Chrissy Schumann, and Jeff Wehrman learn about dining etiquette at the Protocol Dinner for Seniors on Feb. 5. Looking sharp and very employable, seniors!

Left: Fork it over...Keynote speaker Berva Bocklage (Midwest School of Etiquette) shows senior business major Sarah Schelonka how to correctly position a dinner fork while cutting meat. According to Berva, her fork should be held in her left hand, prongs down, while cutting her meat. Then she should carry the food to her mouth with an inward curve of the fork, using her right hand. Side note: name tag goes on the right. Who said dining protocol was easy?

EDUCATION

Left: Leading Reading...Leading a kindergarten reading group at Wildwood Elementary is senior Stacey Gullifer. "Teaching is such a rewarding experience," Stacey said. "Watching the kids learn and grow--and knowing that I'm a part of it--more than outweighs the time and effort I put into it."

Middle: Like mother, like daughter...Posing with Mr. Thompson's 4th grade class at Prosperity Heights Elementary is sophomore Kristie Mayo. Kristie's mom is a teacher, and Kristie has been playing school since she was little. "Teaching impacts the future," she said. "That's why I want to be a teacher."

Education Majors are Put to Another Test

Northwestern College education majors were surprised to hear that, starting this year, they have to pass yet another test before they can get licensed to teach in the state of Minnesota.

The new test is Praxis II, a subject assessment test intended to measure a potential teacher's knowledge of the subjects they will teach. It is part of the Praxis series of tests, which are administered to education students nationally and continually updated based on the evolving needs of individual states. The tests were instituted so that beginning teachers could be held to high professional standards.

The Praxis I measures academic skills such as reading, writing, and mathematics. This test, taken early in a college student's career, used to be the only test mandated by the state for education majors. However, the Praxis II is now required as well, and this new standard--and its cost--is stirring up controversy.

The price tag for the Praxis II test is $150. "We did all we could to lessen the cost," said Dr. Susan Johnson, Northwestern's education department chairperson. Dr. Johnson said the new requirement caught everyone by surprise, but the test is necessary and appropriate. "It's just something students will have to do in order to get that license," she said.

Student reaction was generally unfavorable. Not only was the cost an issue, the tests won't even be graded this year. This year's scores will be used to set the standard for future test scores. Senior education major Jana Vegge said she "feels like a guinea pig."

Senior math education major Andrew Russell said, "There just doesn't seem to be much point in trying on this one, even after forking over that cash." With one last year to wrap things up before starting their teaching careers, many are disappointed that there are so many hoops to jump through. Andrew said, "It feels like the circus never stops."

CLUBS & ORGANIZATIONS

SECTION EDITOR: JESSICA EDWARDS

In college life a balance is needed between academics and extra-curricular activities. The clubs and activities here at NWC help to provide that balance. Clubs Like Circle K, REDOC and True North are a good motivation for “Going Deeper” in relationships with Christ as well as those around us, whether on campus or off.

"Seventy-five students who anonymously pray for and encourage NWC faculty." --Katie Wells, Archangel

An NWC organization since 1982, Guardian Angels are students who select or receive the name of a faculty/staff/administration member and anonymously send them notes of encouragement and pray for them throughout the year. In the spring there is a revealing party so the saints can find out who their Guardian Angel was all year.

Goal: to plant a seed of hope

This year's Streetlight ministry group has a new twist. With this year's new male-female co-leadership comes a more broad-based focus with Friday night trips to Uptown, clubs, shelters, and Old Hennepin Avenue. Streetlight as a ministry is more open to new ideas this year. They still go out on the streets, but they are trying out new avenues of ministry. Streetlight volunteers are finding that going to the shelters is a great ministry because they can see the same people and build relationships. "Source" is a new ministry that reaches out to troubled kids, particularly gothics. # PERFORMING ARTS

SECTION EDITOR: MIMIS MARTINEZ

Much time and energy are put into Northwestern's drama productions and many people do not always realize the amount of effort that goes into creating what is seen on stage. Senior Levon Dimmick parallels this with Going Deeper in his Christian walk: "My walk with Christ often entails a lot behind the scenes that others don't see. It's not about me, it's about glorifying God in every way possible no matter if someone sees it or not."

"You're A Good Man Charlie Brown"

OCTOBER 25 - NOVEMBER 4, 2001

TOTINO FINE ARTS CENTER - MARANATHA HALL

This year's musical was "You're a Good Man Charlie Brown." The cast put many hours into this play, practicing anywhere from 23-30 hrs per week up until opening night. The actors weren't the only people hard at work. There was a lot of tech work put into the play too. John Rehorst, sound tech for the play, put in 90+ hrs two weeks before the play and around 65+ the week before it went on stage. The set this year was rented from the Ordway because it was more cost effective. The cast had a vocal coach and a choreographer that came in. Senior Sarah Brace was the dance captain when the choreographer wasn't able to attend rehearsal. Sarah (who played Lucy in the production, pictured below) said, "I really enjoyed doing the research for this production. I got to read lots of "Peanuts" comics and watch movies."

Upclose and personal with the guys in Men's Chorus.

"Men's Chorus helped me to obtain a closer bond with my friends and gave me a better appreciation of men's music"
 -Scotty Williams, freshman

"It's funny how I'm in a Punk Rock band and I sing in choir."
 -Josh Kuss, freshman

Row 4: Kristin Miller, Joelle Knappen, Tracy Tepley, Rachel Painter, Kayla Koep, Sarah Olson, Emelie Grill, Cassandra Nash, Julia Scott, Angie Oliver

There are several exciting aspects of the Women's Chorale according to freshman Amber White. She says that practicing is very enjoyable for her because they have a lot of fun in rehearsal, yet they don't have the formality of a performance. Amber said that the first performance (Showcase of Talent) was fun because it was their first performance of the year and the group had a chance to show everyone what they were about. Amber also said that she particularly enjoyed the St. John's music festival that Women's Chorale, as well as Men's Chorus, attended. "The space we sang in was very acoustic and we had a chance to really focus on our sound," she said. Women's Chorale and Men's Chorus were again featured in the Harvest Sounds fall concert, Christmas at Northwestern, and finally at their spring concert.

College Choir

Of the seventy-three students that make up the College Choir (the highest number ever), only five are new freshmen. The College Choir will be performing in Showcase of Talent, Christmas at Northwestern, the Concertoaria concert, many various performances throughout the year, and finally, their annual tour. This spring the College Choir is bound for Scandinavia for a total of seventeen days and will travel throughout Norway and Sweden. Junior Maria Wilson says, "tour is the funniest, most exciting aspect of choir because it is a mission opportunity to show people the love of Christ through our music before, during, and after performances."

Chamber Orchestra

Chamber Orchestra on Summer Tour

The Chamber Orchestra traveled to North and South Dakota, Idaho, Montana and Wyoming for their summer concert tour this year. They played in multiple churches, including one in Boise, Idaho. This particular church sticks out in sophomore Heather Palkki's mind because of the huge sign they had to welcome them there. They also had a huge meal prepared for all of the students.

One of the great opportunities these students had was to spend their evenings with a member from the church. Heather's favorite memory was of her homestay in Helena, Montana. The woman she stayed with was very poor and had only a small house, but she was very welcoming to them. "She took us shopping and showed us around the town," Heather remembered.

The trip was not all about performances, though. They stopped along their route to enjoy plenty of sight seeing. They saw the Grand Tetons and had the opportunity to spend a day in Jackson, Wyoming. According to Heather, the day they spent in Jackson was the most exciting event of the entire trip. She was glad to be back in Wyoming, her birthplace, and she loved seeing the mountains again. She also recalled that the whitewater rafting in Jackson was quite fun, but really cold.

ATHLETICS

SECTION EDITOR: JONATHAN STANKEVITZ

"No greater love has man than this: that he lay down his life for his friends." (John 15:13). "This verse helped the entire team to grow together physically and spiritually as one. It helped us to keep our focus on a goal greater than winning games." Says freshman Ben Wolcyn. Going Deeper in Athletics at NWC allows athletes and coaches to strengthen their skills as well as their relationships with each other. Most importantly, however, each athlete is challenged in their walk with Christ through team meetings and the interactions between players and coaches.

UMAC Coach of the Year:

Coach Tim Grosz was named the Upper Midwest Athletic Conference Coach of the Year for the second time in as many years.

UMAC Player of the Year:

Junior John Reeves led Northwestern in scoring and was in the top five of virtually every offensive statistical category in the Upper Midwest Conference.

A Team Effort:

The Eagles have soared because of each individual playing as part of the team.

A Thing of Beauty:

Senior Matt Whittaker drains a three.

Andrew the Great

In the UMAC Tournament Championship game he played great, but it was his final shot which gave Northwestern the win over Presentation College and sent the team to Branson, Missouri for the national tournament that truly made junior Andrew Ryks the hero.

Intramural Basketball

Northwestern students enjoy intramural basketball as a way to avoid "Going Deeper" into their studies.

"It can be shocking to take out our freshman yearbook and see how our portraits have changed. Some of us have drastically changed over the four, five, or even six years that we've been here, while others don't look any different from the first day that they drove onto campus," Says senior Jana Vegge. But no matter how little or how much students change physically over their college years, one thing is for sure: We have all been challenged to "Go Deeper" through our Bible classes, friendships, and the struggles and joys that college life presents to us.

NWC Dives into the World

Northwestern College is spreading its wings, all the way to Quito, Ecuador. On October 1, 2001, Northwestern College, Quito Campus opened its doors and began classes.

Northwestern, in conjunction with HCJB World Radio's Christian Center for Communication (CCC), will open the first international branch college of Northwestern.

The CCC first opened in 1984 as a three-year program training Spanish speaking people in a variety of communication skills. The school's program focuses on Christian communication through radio, television, and journalism.

The only problem with this three-year program was that it was not an accredited institution. The idea of collaborating with another school stemmed from the lack of recognition that the organization was receiving from various companies.

After the CCC talked with several different schools about their desire to be affiliated with a larger, prestigious Christian campus, Northwestern finally fell into place. KTIS radio representative, Paul Ramseyer, heard about this opportunity to open a branch campus and presented the concept to Tim Tomlinson, dean of alternative education.

"This was a unique opportunity for the college, and a great way to broaden our scope and outreach. I got excited about it!" said Tomlinson.

The college soon found out this was not going to be such an easy task. The first proposal made to the North Central Association of colleges and schools (NCA) was turned down. About three years later, with a slightly changed proposal, the NCA approved the partnership of both schools.

Consequently, the Northwestern branch in Quito was established. The school now offers an accredited Associate of Arts degree with an emphasis in Broadcasting/Electronic Media.

"We feel really good about this, the two institutions are really close in terms of theology, mindset, and missions," Tomlinson said.

It is hoped the new partnership will create a greater student population. With an increase in curriculum and additional help to meet certain academic standards, the school could possibly offer a bachelor's program in the near future.

"It is the hope," stated Tomlinson, "that in the near future faculty and students will be able to teach and study overseas."

A group of Northwestern faculty and board members traveled to Ecuador for the first days of classes to perform the inauguration and welcoming ceremony for the new partnership.

"This is exciting from Northwestern's standpoint, our first international branch campus," said Ripley Smith, chair of the communications department. "It is kind of cool!" Story by Sarah Wohlhuter, junior

Freshmen Orientation Remains a Memory for All

Rollerskating, sumo-wrestling, and clandestine trips to the bell tower made freshmen orientation a grand memory for most students at Northwestern College. The thrill of a new place, meeting new friends, and eating some of the best cafeteria food in the state were just a few of the highlights incoming freshmen experienced.

Moving out of high school and into the college lifestyle was not an easy adjustment for any student to make. However, we all had to do it and in the end, it made us better people. One thing is certain: freshmen orientation helped with that moving experience to create lasting friendships, and forced even the most shy of us to come out of our comfort zone and into the real world.

And so the countdown begins. Remember the events leading up to your settlement at NWC? The days before college remain busy and you are about ready to go out of your mind with things to do before the big move occurs. There are places to visit one more time, and people you have to say goodbye to, but you find yourself anticipating that drive to a school that may be fifteen minutes away for some, or fifteen hours for others. Finally, your family drives through the gates of NWC and you encounter many young people with matching shirts. Yes, this is the start of orientation.

As you continue the drive to the front of the dorms, you notice all the cars parked, flashers on, and many people bustling around trying to look like they know where they're going. Your family helps you move your belongings into your dorm and suddenly, amidst the hugs and tears, you are left alone with two or more strangers that you hope will like you and vice versa. The anticipation has become reality. College has arrived and you are on your own, free to make your own choices and live your own life.

In a short amount of time, you are given a schedule of events for the following days ahead. Fun activities are planned and you cannot wait to get started. After being assigned to color groups with leaders who remind you of camp counselors as they tell you what to do, where to go, and help introduce you to many new faces, the process is almost complete.

Sarah Day, sophomore, a group leader from Orientation 2001, found new and improved ways to make orientation even more fun for her group.

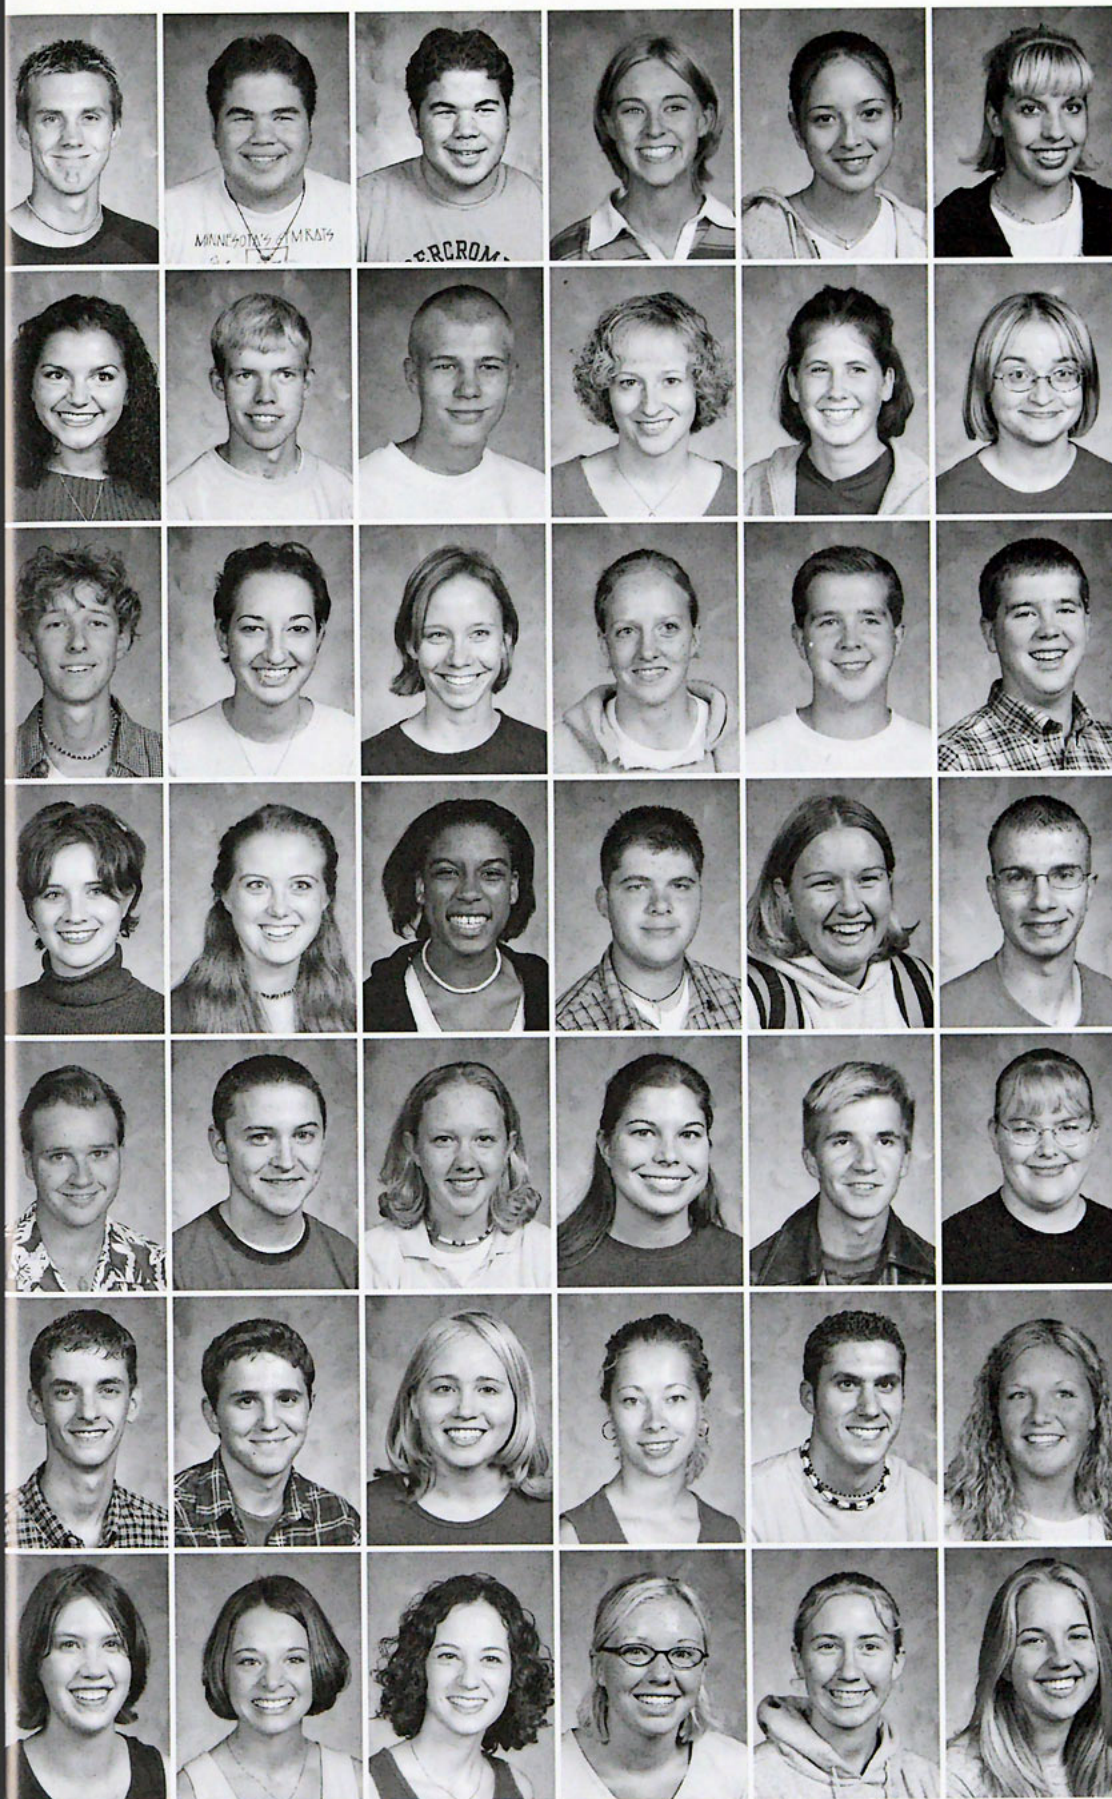

"Ever since my experience in freshmen orientation," says Day, "I've always wanted to help provide that same kind of atmosphere and excitement that I felt during my first week of college."

Orientation went off without a hitch this year, thanks to many awesome leaders and organization crews.

Most would say that they would want to be a freshmen ever again, but the memories they take with them from orientation will last a lifetime.

Get Your Own

Next year freshmen will be required to have their own computer. Many questions arise when a demand like that is put into place. Why do students need their own computers? Why isn't Northwestern able to provide their students with computers? Do returning students need their own computer also? What if a student does not have the financial means to purchase a computer? Will this computer requirement sway future students on their decision to come to NWC?

"Technology has become such a large part of everybody's day," said Steve Morrow, executive director of technology at Northwestern College.

Northwestern has a student body of 1,600. There are two main computer labs. The computer lab in Nazareth has seventy computers. The student center computer lab in the Hartill-Knutson dorms (the only twenty-four hour lab) has only twenty-five computers. There is also a small computer lab in the Berntsen Resource Center. There are fifteen computers and only four or five are available for typing. The other ten are reserved for research. If you add up the numbers that means there are 110 computers for 1,600 students. If there was someone on every single computer on campus, which is usually the case (especially in the student center), there would still be 1,490 students who may need to use a computer.

Many of the students need the computers at the same time. For example, in the Naz computer lab, classes are often held when a student may need to use a computer. The access to a personal computer lessens the chance of that happening to a student.

The question of returning students having to purchase a computer if they don't already own one is still up in the air. As of yet, the only students who will absolutely need a computer are freshmen. This year's freshmen may have to have one next year. If a student is majoring in business or a major that has a huge part of their curriculum focused on computer use, they may also have to purchase a computer. Juniors and seniors will not have to own their own computer; however they will be urged to have one.

Many students are not financially capable of buying a computer without some form of financial aid, or discounts. Computers are not included in tuition. However, if a student already receives financial aid, financial aid will also be included for computers.

"They (NWC) would be willing to work with you one on one to find out your needs. We want to be very sensitive to that and make sure we are providing avenues and resources," said Morrow.

Otherwise, many companies already offer student discounts on computers. NWC gets most of their computers from Reason, a computer company located in Lino Lakes, but if a student chooses to go a different route that is also acceptable.

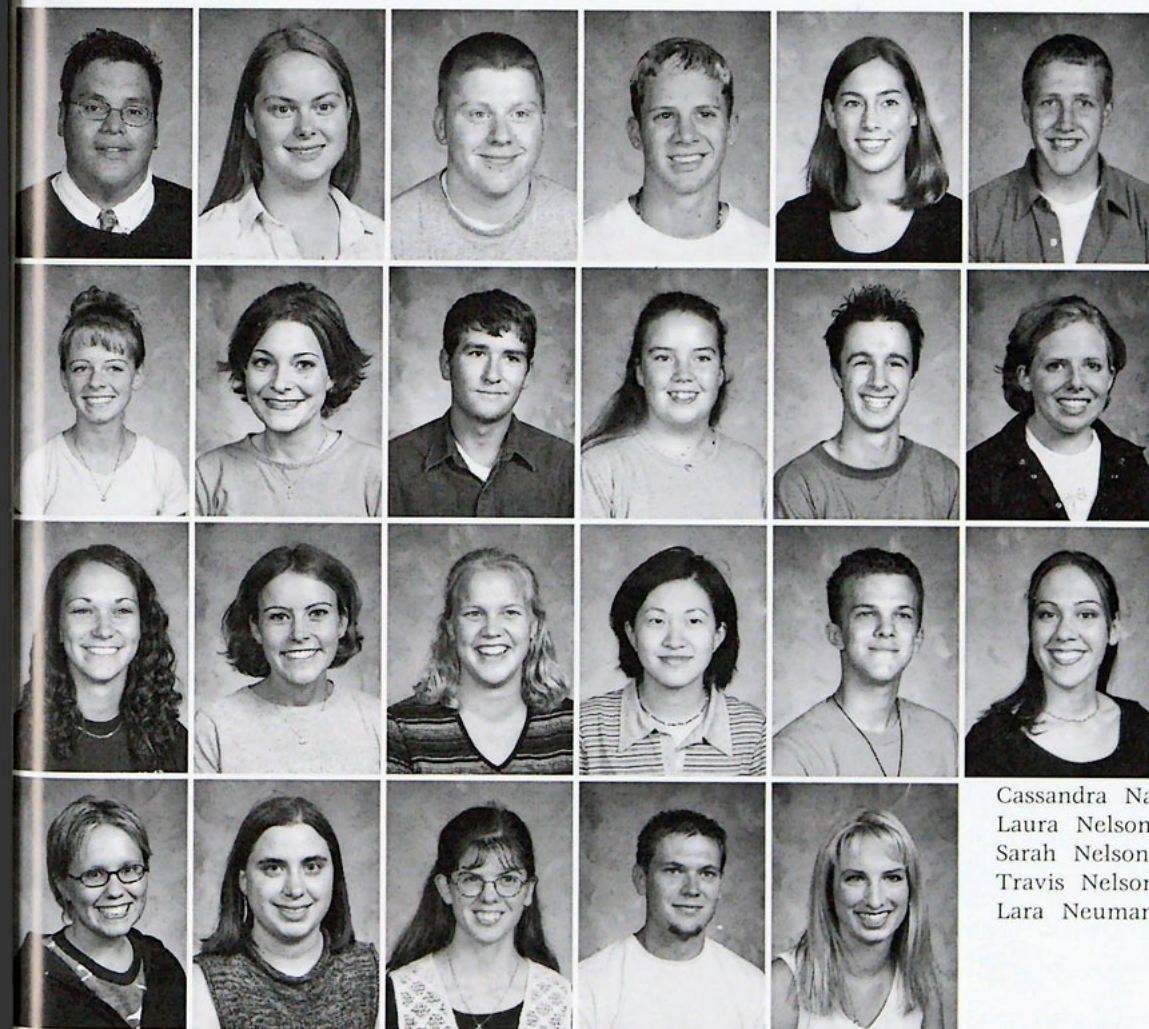

Will this computer requirement steer incoming students away from attending NWC? The assumption is that it will, however Morrow believes that requiring students to have computers will have a positive impact and may help students make a decision to come to NWC because Northwestern prepares their students technologically for the future.

Dorm Life

Ah, the joy of living in the same building with hundreds of college freshmen and sophomores. Yelling and screaming until three in the morning, two month old cheeseburgers left in your laundry basket, and finding your roommate's underwear in your pillow case. Priceless memories.

Dorm life is a time when all types of people from all different places come together and are somehow supposed to get through the year with straight A's. College is about pulling all-nighters because you couldn't get your roommate to stop analyzing his great block he had in the football game the night before. Or trying to decide if finishing your history paper or going to watch Shrek is more important.

Even though we have all these important decisions, we always remember to help out our classmates. Saying "Hi!" to someone in the hall, or attending the concert of prayer in the student center. Even something as simple as lending your neighbor a cup of milk for their cereal because theirs has gone sour. Whenever you need something, you have hundreds of neighbors within walking distance.

Even though we have vast differences, we all seem to come together by the end of each school year. The saddest part of the year is finals time in May when everyone has to go home. Someday when you look back on this part of your life, maybe the one good thing that you can pull out of the chaotic period called college is the time you spent with all your classmates in the dorms.

Northwestern College and Accessibility

According to the American Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA), Northwestern College meets accessibility compliance requirements. Title III of this act says, "all new construction and modifications must be accessible to individuals with disabilities. For existing facilities, barriers to service must be removed if readily receivable."

Yvonne Redmond-Brown, associate professor of education and director of disability services, says that Northwestern goes beyond ADA compliance. "Any institution receiving public funds is under the guidelines of the law. However, we are under compliance because of what we believe," she said.

Northwestern has done many things to accommodate individuals with disabilities, including installing automatic doors, renovating dorm rooms, and adding ramps on stairways. Redmond-Brown says that many people are involved in these changes, including members of Student Development, Public Safety, Building and Grounds, and Disabilities Office for Support Services (DOSS).

Sophomore Britta Nicholson is pleased with the things that have been accomplished. "They are not ignoring issues. I've talked to them and I think that it is becoming easier," says Nicholson. She is also pleased with the environment at Northwestern and comments, "People can look beyond what I deal with every day and look beyond the chair and just see me."

However, Nicholson believes that there are still things that need to be worked on. The tunnel between Nazareth and Riley is completely inaccessible, along with the campus busses. Also, the elevator in the Nazareth building often has problems.

According to Lori Christenson, manager of campus safety, the elevator in the Nazareth building was not originally intended for passenger use, much less wheelchair use. She says that it was originally used for crates and boxes. This is why there are frequent problems with the elevator.

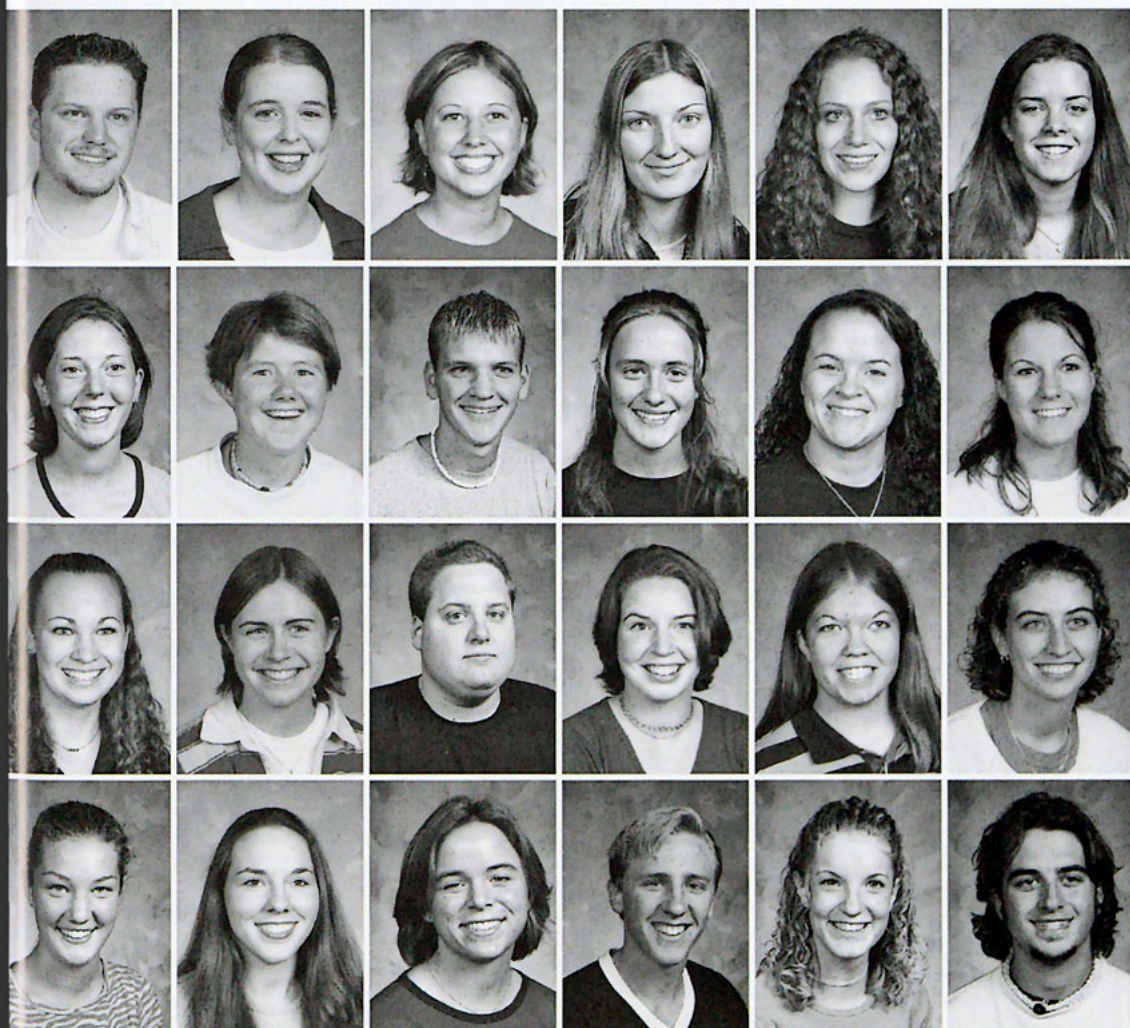

The lack of accessible transportation becomes most problematic in the winter. Christenson says that she has to lift students out of their wheelchairs and transport them by truck when it snows.

Redmond-Brown acknowledges that there are inadequacies in the area of accessibility. She says, "There is not perfection in the body of Christ, so why do we expect perfection in every day life? Perfection comes in our willingness to step in and help each other to overcome the barriers we encounter."

According to Redmond-Brown, the inadequacies of accessibility force students to grow. "God creates these opportunities to help and support one another via physical barriers within a community," says Redmond-Brown. "We are all one body. It is just a matter of all of us working collectively to strengthen the whole body."

Redmond-Brown adds that accessibility issues at Northwestern College "make us all more aware, more appreciative and more cohesive as a family in Christ."

Not Too Hard, Not Too Easy

College is a time for practice. Some practice who they will be in the years to come, some practice work, and some practice play. However, we all practice.

College can also be a very stressful time. A student may have to juggle schoolwork, relationships, and for some, a job may be added to that equation. Northwestern College offers students and staff many on-campus employment opportunities. It would take a while to describe all the opportunities they provide, so this article will provide only two: the easiest and the hardest. The easiest being the job as weight room attendant and the hardest being an Eagle's Nest employee.

A weight room attendant's job is easy. The job consists of watching people who come to work out and make sure that they are not in danger of getting hurt, racking weights, being a spotter (assisting someone who is lifting something that could possibly crush them), and cleaning up and wiping off equipment. Joe Palke, junior, said the easiest part of the job is "not having to do a whole lot at once." The most difficult part is "cleaning up," he said. The average hours per week for a weight room attendant is a total of six, two hours per shift. The benefits to working this job are that you can read and do homework at work. When asked if he would recommend this job to anyone else, Palke's response was, "Oh, yeah."

The hardest and most stressful job at Northwestern is as an Eagle's Nest employee. To the outsider or observer, working at The Nest may seem like a "cup of tea." Nest employees can tell you that it is fun at times, still it is no "cup of tea." The job consists of serving and helping customers, cashiering, and big time clean up, especially if you are a closer. The easiest part of this job is wiping tables or going on break. The hardest part of this job is dealing with customers and cleaning up. Sometimes the customer's can be so snotty and rude, it is almost as if they have forgotten that you are also a student who is just trying to make cash on the side. The average hours a student works per week can vary from four to as many as forty per week. The shifts also vary; one person may only work two hours while another person may work eight hours. The benefits to this job are free food and the opportunity to meet really cool and diverse people. This job is recommended only to someone who is capable of being flexible, has the right attitude, and has a great personality.

Chapel Attendance

Northwestern College students are allowed to skip fourteen out of seventy-two chapels per semester. How do students use these allotted skips?

Ryan Evans, sophomore, said, "I have other things to do. I either have homework or I need to catch up on my rest."

Caleb Newby, sophomore, said he has skipped in the past, "because I didn't have any classes until one o'clock and it was so easy to sleep."

"I usually skip because I am studying for a test or catching up on homework," says Julie Bryngelson, junior. "Seldom do I use it to catch up on sleep."

Northwestern does not allow students to scan in their names and leave before chapel is finished. This act is called scanning and scrambling.

Evans said, "Scanning and scrambling is an unjust and morally poor choice. It is for people with no brains."

Bryngelson said, "Scanning and scramming is a crime and they should be punished brutally. Just kidding! I personally don't do it, but it is between the scrammer and the Lord."

However, when students go beyond their allotted skips they are fined or placed on chapel probation.

According to the Northwestern Student Handbook, once fines reach $70, a student may have to do community service, complete a Chapel Probation Contract, meet with staff, complete a written assignment, or possibly an assortment of the above. If these requirements are not met, a student will not be allowed to register for the following semester.

Dean Paulson said, "Petitions are available for unusual circumstances." Examples of these circumstances include commuting students who do not have class before 12:30, illness, family emergencies, and jobs.

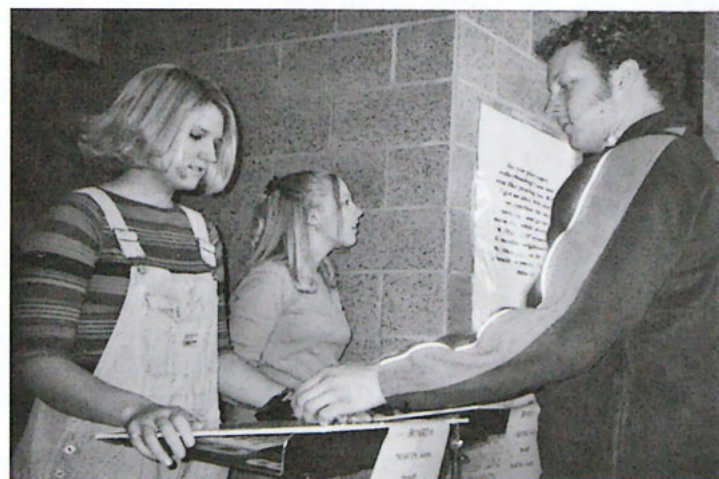

What techniques do students use to keep track of their chapel skips?

Evans said, "I write how many I have skipped in my planner. I use them to the fullest extent."

However, Newby said if a student does run into problems with the authorities concerning chapel issues are easy to work with.

Northwestern Welcomes A New Bridge....

Two years ago the bridge to the island off the campus shore was closed and eventually torn down after becoming unsafe.

The construction of the new bridge was completed this year after a two-year delay. The project was finally completed around Thanksgiving break and students were given a surprise ribbon-cutting ceremony complete with Smore's made over bonfires on the island.

Monica Groves, dean of Student Development said, "The island itself is a retreat spot for people. With the beach and volleyball area, along with the hill and view of the lake, it is a good place for solitude, study, visiting or walking with a friend."

The bridge was the access to the island, so not having that available was a disappointment to the students."

Located on the island is a building that is often referred to as the island chapel. However, Groves said, "the building is not really a chapel at all. It is a building that was originally a burial vault when the campus belonged to the Archdiocese of St. Paul. When Northwestern purchased the property, the body was exhumed and the building has been empty, except for some storage. The building is rarely opened, is very sparse, and is more of a conversation piece to the college than a functional building."

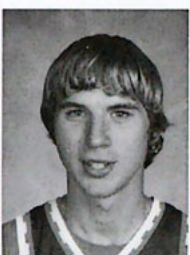

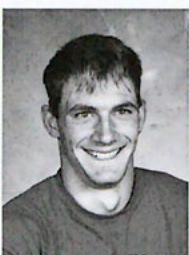

The estimated cost of the project reached $75,000, which still does not include the cost of a walkway from the parking lot to the bridge or any landscaping around the bridge and walkway. Groves said, "According to Doug Schroeder (Vice President of Business and Finance), $50,000 was set aside from the year end surplus for the fiscal year ending 6.30.99. An additional $25,000 for the bridge construction will be requested from the small amount of Phase II monies from this year's budget.

With the bridge now functioning, students will be able to enjoy the beauty of surrounding Lake Johanna when visiting the island.

Junior Jennie Little is excited about the newest installment to the island. "I think it's really exciting. I visited friends on the campus before I was accepted as a student here. The bridge was still in place and I remember my friends talking about what a nice place the island was to just hang out and study or talk. I'm glad to see the college undertaking these kinds of projects. I think it helps make the campus even more beautiful (if that's possible) as well as encouraging more student-to-student interaction."

...And A New President

Dr. Cureton and his wife, Gayle, on campus shortly after they were introduced to the student body.

On November 20, 2001, after many prayers and over a year of searching, the Board of Trustees announced Dr. Alan Cureton as Northwestern College's eighth president. Dr. Cureton comes to Northwestern College from John Brown University in Siloam Springs, AR, where he served as vice president for university advancement since 1995. Both Dr. Cureton and his wife, Gayle, have been involved with higher education since the mid-1980's. The institutions they have worked with include Sterling College, Iowa State University and Northwestern College in Orange City, IA.

Dr. Cureton and his wife Gayle have three children: Luke, 22; Rachel, 20; and Michael, 18. Because Michael is finishing his senior year in high school in Siloam Springs, Dr. Cureton will be commuting between Arkansas and Minnesota until he and his wife relocate to the Twin Cities area in June, 2002.

On January 14, 2002, Dr. Cureton addressed chapel for the first time as the president of Northwestern College and Radio. Both Dr. and Mrs. Cureton spent the rest of the week highly visible to faculty, staff and students as they tried to meet and get to know as many as possible.

During his first week, Dr. Cureton was approached with two questions from the student body. The first question was whether he would be willing to eat a live goldfish at the pep rally. Although there was a long pause before the answer came, Dr. Cureton showed his good-natured spirit as he agreed that he would if he had too. The second question posed to him from the student body addressed the very real problem of parking on campus. Two days later, Dr. Cureton was back on the Maranatha stage acknowledging the importance of the student body's concerns as he presented a few solutions to the parking crisis. The solutions were well received by the student body as students came to understand that Dr. Cureton is here to do what he can to meet the needs on campus, even if it means parking off campus like many others.

The Scroll staff joins the rest of the student body in welcoming Dr. Cureton and his family to Northwestern College.

The Edge Vs. Vespers

The Edge and Vespers are two opportunities for students to get involved in more praise and worship time. "Praise and worship are essential to the life of every Christian," said Stankevitz, freshman. A lot of people are not quite sure what The Edge and Vespers are.

Every Wednesday night on the Northwestern campus, an event is held called "The Edge." This service consists of about a half hour of student led praise followed by a speaker, often a Northwestern graduate or student. "The Edge" starts every Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. in the Totino Fine Arts Building.

The music part of the service is headed up by senior Rick Frith. Recently Frith and members of his band held auditions for students who wanted to be involved in playing or singing for "The Edge." Every week, there are new faces on stage.

The people who are chosen to speak each Wednesday range from missionaries who have traveled all over the world to current students to Northwestern Alumni.

Off campus, there is also a worship service called "Vespers." The word "Vespers" means "worship" which really explains what it is, "Vespers" is simply an hour of praise and worship. It is held at Bethel College, which is very close to Northwestern. From Northwestern, Bethel is located North on Snelling off of the County Road E exit.

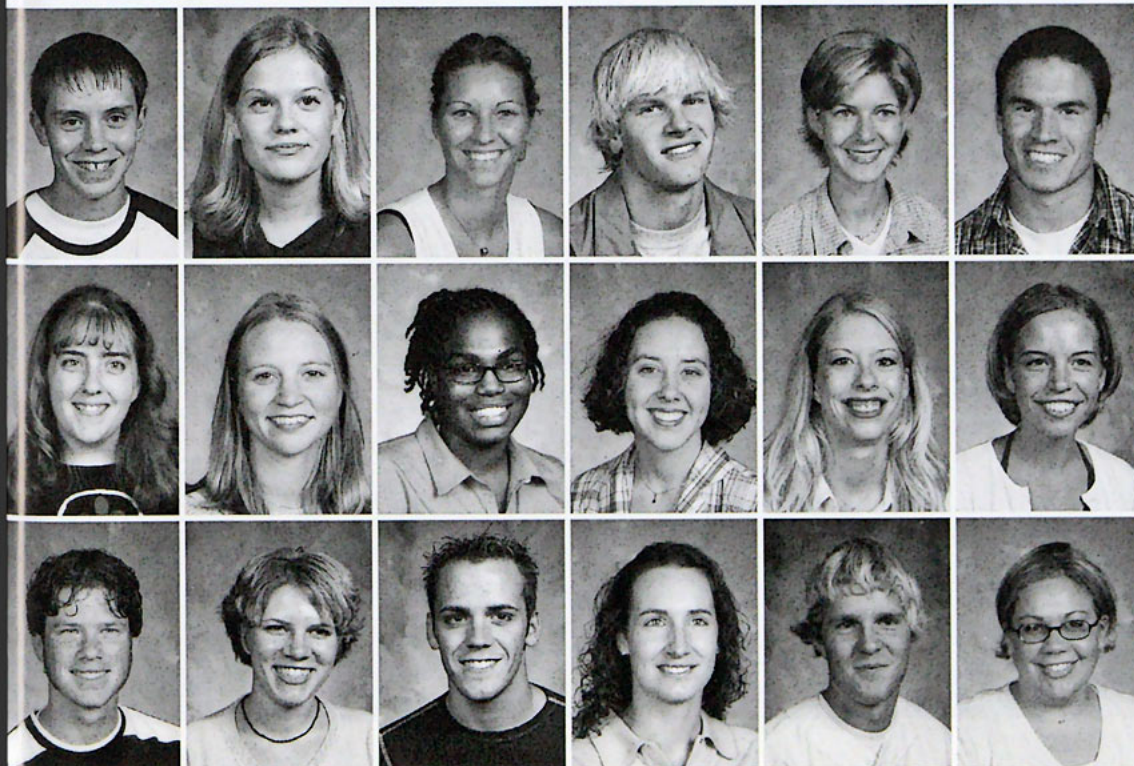

There are two services, one at 8:00 p.m. and the other at 10:00 p.m. It draws hundreds of student mainly from Northwestern and Bethel. Stankevitz commented, "When you walk into the doors of 'Vespers', there is an energy you can almost touch. It is a very intense hour of worship. It is a time when you are forced to seek out God, and you have all the time you need to do it. At churches or at Northwestern chapels, you are on a strict schedule."

"Vespers" will continue to meet throughout this school year and also in years to come as well as "The Edge."

Commuters on Campus

When asked what the best thing about being a commuter was, senior Lisa Carlson answered, "I love being able to get away and separate myself from school. It is great living in the city and experiencing the variety of world views that are out there."

Whether you are living at home, married, or past the age of 20 and do not live on campus, you are considered a commuter. Commuters make up about 40% of the Northwestern College student body.

The commuter newsletter, campus lockers, special meal plans, commuter parking lots, and the commuter lounge were all designed to meet the needs of commuters. The newsletter was designed to keep commuters in the loop. The lockers gave their backs a break from all the books they must carry around, and it provided a place to hang their winter parka on those many snowy days. Meal plans allowed the commuters to buy a cheaper lunch, or decide to skip meals all together. The commuters had constantly complained about the lack of parking spaces, so a new lot was established off campus and the commuters could be shuttled in by the big gray bus. The commuter lounge provided a place for commuters to grab a cup of coffee, eat a meal from Cafe Naz, or do some quick last-minute studying.

Commuters had unique lives from resident students, but they too made up an important element of the college community.

Goodbye to a Dear Friend...

White or wheat? Lenny waits on students in the sandwich line with his characteristic smile.

Leonard (Lenny) Matejka was a special man, and Northwestern College was blessed with his presence for the few years he was employed with Bon Appetit. He was known around NWC's campus as Lenny the 'Sandwich Man' and many looked to Lenny as a grandfather figure. Many would flock to the sandwich line not in anticipation of the two pieces of bread with some meat and cheese in the middle, but instead for the smile and encouragement that Lenny brought to those in line.

Lenny died Monday, January 14th, of heart complications. A memorial service was held on January 16th in Nazareth Chapel. Family, friends and co-workers, students, alumni and faculty gathered to remember Lenny, his life, and his contributions to this campus.

When announcing Lenny's passing to the student body, Dean Paulson, director of Campus Ministries, said, "I could hear an audible gasp throughout Maranatha," a sign of the impact that Lenny had at Northwestern. The gasp heard that day in Maranatha signified the realization that Lenny would no longer be waiting at the end of the line to ask how classes were going or to call the girls sweetheart and the guys buddy as he told them to have a great day.

Lenny was interviewed for a Column article about a year ago, and during that interview he said that he enjoyed working at Northwestern because he was able to be a grandfather figure to those he came across. Besides being a grandfather to the Northwestern College community, Lenny also maintained a deep love for his family. "Lenny loved his grandchildren very much. He showed me pictures of them and introduced me to them when they visited. He was so proud of them," said junior Kelly Anderson.

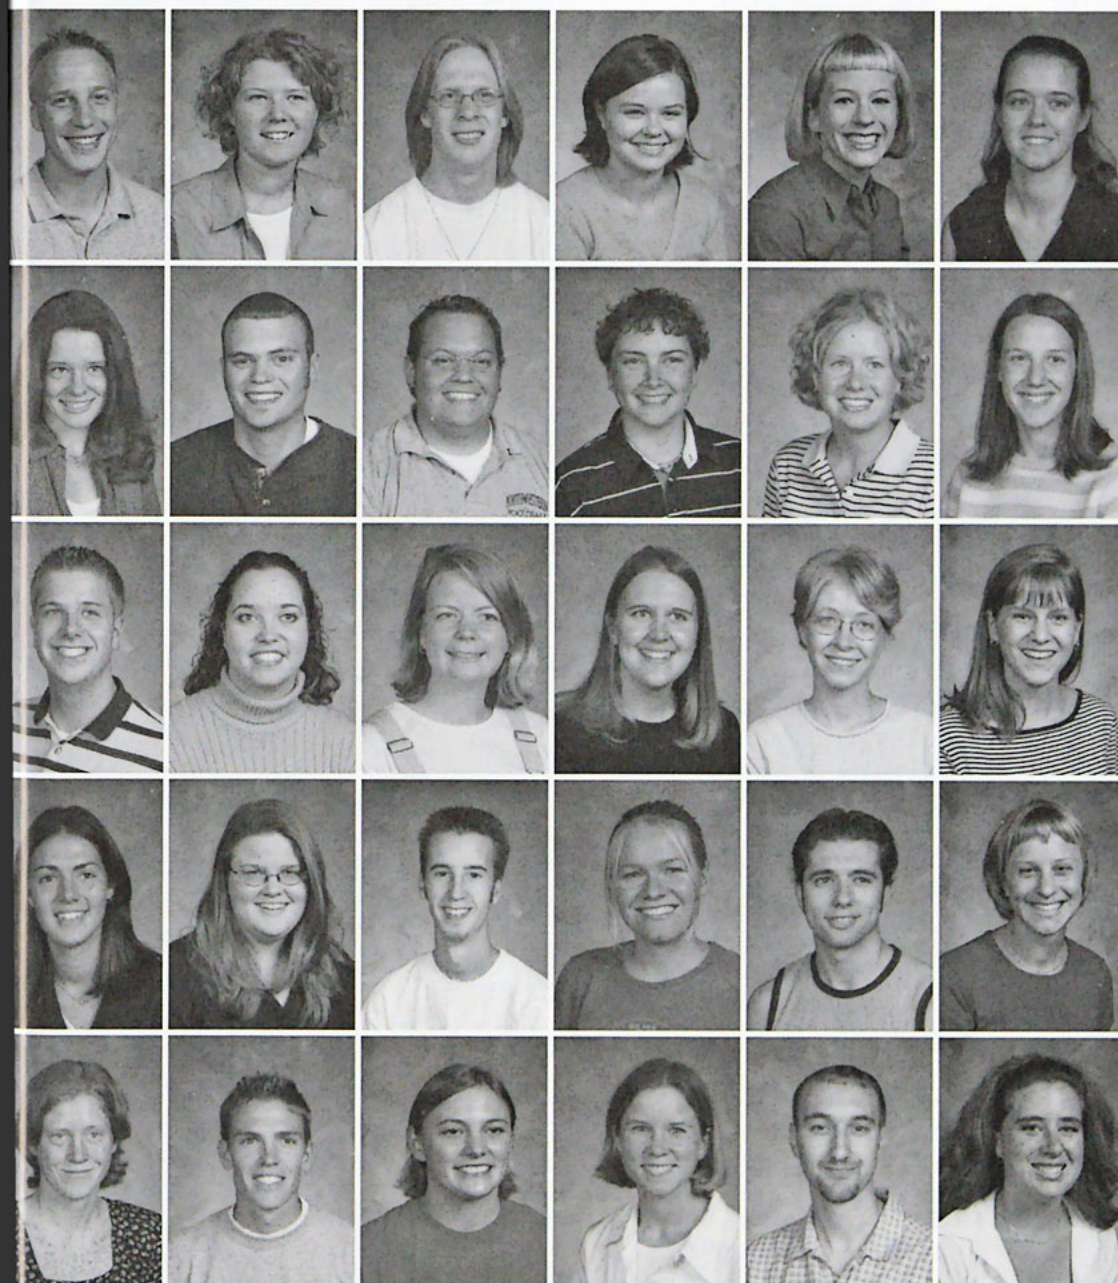

As Rita Heins, a Bon Appetit employee said, "If you find one friend like Leonard, you have everything...I'm so proud to say he was my friend." As each of us remembers Lenny, let us never forget the joy and kindness he brought into our lives with a few simple words and a smile.

Advice for Graduating Seniors from Faculty & Staff

"Dream big dreams for the glory of God. Trust God radically to fulfill those dreams and don't try to 'engineer' your own fulfillment of those dreams."

~ Dr. Daryl Aaron

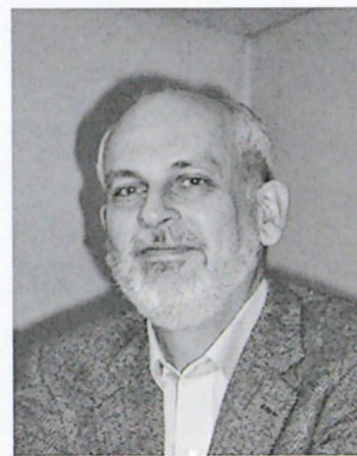

"You are not what you think you are, but what you think, you are; dusty bibles lead to dirty lives; and the Bible will keep you from sin or sin will keep you from the Bible. Remember, the secret to the Christian life is learning how to enjoy God."

~ Dr. J.E. Harvey Martin

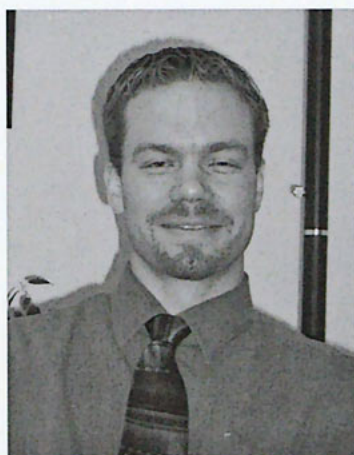

"Your schooling may be over, but your education has just begun. Keep learning and walking with God."

~ Dr. Garry Morgan

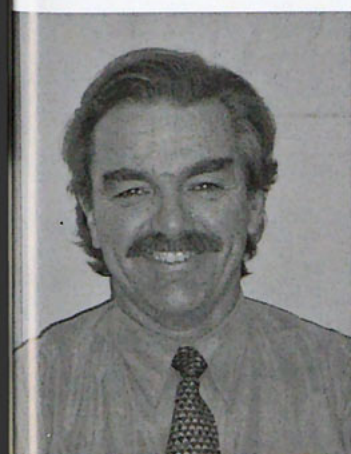

In no particular order, 1. Get out of debt as soon as possible and work on staying out of debt. 2. Chase after God with all of your being, passionately. Do whatever it takes to get intimate with God. 3. Follow your dreams, whatever they may be. 4. Love passionately, love people, love life. 5. Find some kind of big cause to get involved in."

~ Paul Bradley

"Whatever you're doing, make sure you're seeking the Lord's will and have some kind of ministry. As you look for jobs and careers, God will lead you toward something you enjoy doing, so be sure to look to Him for direction."

~ Dr. Rich Long

"May you go forth from the cement tunnels of NWC
To live powerfully in the shadow of the cross,
To live profoundly in the midst of the crowd,
To linger prayerfully in the pastures of our Lord.
Enjoy!!"

~ Peter Dybvad

"Take a long walk in the woods with God."

A Graduation to Remember

This year's December graduation was the first ever held at Northwestern College. It was also held in Maranatha Auditorium instead of the Ericksen Center for the first time. Because the graduating class was so much smaller, 80 students versus the 300 that usually graduate in May, they decided to change the venue. Many of the graduates liked the different atmosphere, including Christian Education major, Jon Dierenfeld. "It was more family oriented and not as lofty," he said. "It also wasn't scorching hot!"

Since there was no permanent college President at the time, Hal Miller, vice president of academic affairs, stepped in to shake the graduates' hands and receive their "gifts." The tradition of graduates presenting the President with gifts carried on, and as usual, most of them were promptly deposited in the nearby trash can. The Christian Ministries graduates coordinated their efforts and presented Dr. Miller with some cups from Cafe Naz. The grand finale of their department was presented by Youth Ministries major Jeremy Swigart with 6 Naz cups!

No graduation ceremony would be complete without a graduation speaker, and this one was no exception. Youth Ministries major Dave Griffith was selected by the senior class senators to deliver the message traditionally given by a graduating senior. Dave decided to deliver a challenge to his fellow classmates, using Joshua and the Israelites as an example. The Israelites used to keep stones as memorials of God's faithfulness, such as the time they walked through the Jordan River. This way their children would ask them someday what the stones represented, and their parents could tell them the stories of God's past faithfulness. Dave brought his own stone to illustrate this point. He told the graduates that in the same way that the Israelites had, the graduates should remember God's faithfulness to them in the past. Even though the past few years may have been tough, God was faithful to see them through. Furthermore, he encouraged them to trust in God's faithfulness in the future. He will continue to be faithful to His children.

Since that fateful graduation day, these graduates have stepped out on their own journeys, each following a different path. Some are taking a break from school and work while seeking out God's will for them in the future. Others are working temporary jobs to pay bills as they search for more permanent work, while still others have found their "perfect" job or graduate school. So, now that they've left the confines of the undergraduate world, what do these graduates have to say to those of us left behind? For those of you that can't wait until it's over, listen to some advice from Dave. "Coach Miller told me once that the mountaintop is cold and windy - climbing is where it's at." In other words, enjoy the time that you have here, and don't focus entirely on the end. For those of you getting ready to graduate soon, remember Kim Backstrom's advice: "Bring a camera to take pictures [of graduation] and enjoy the moment. Don't be scared, but have fun."

Congratulations Graduates!

A little bit excited.

Graduate Jon Dierenfeld holds the rock that he loaned his roommate Dave Griffith to be used in his speech. Jon was certainly excited to be moving on from these walls!

One final walk in Maranatha.

Graduates walk toward Maranatha Stage during the processional. Due to the smaller size of the graduating class, they were able to hold the ceremony in Maranatha this December. Many graduates commented that it was a much cozier ceremony than the one's held in the Ericksen center.

Your senior class speaker.

Nominated by the senior senators to deliver the graduation message was graduate Dave Griffith. He challenged seniors to remember God's steadfast faithfulness in their lives.

Finally, my diploma!

Congratulating graduate Lisa Kropf on her achievement is Hal Miller. Many graduates were disappointed to learn that their diplomas weren't given to them on graduation day. Rather, they had to wait so their grades could be processed and they received them later in the mail.

Congratulations to the

Elizabeth Joy Bergfalk

Elizabeth Joy,
When life gets "hairy" just remember your joyful smile and that God knows about each little detail.

Susan C. Bishop

Congratulations!
May your sensitive spirit and your contagious joy light up the world for Jesus!
We love you!
Dad, Mom and Tracie

Love, Mom and Dad
Megan, Sarah, Matt, Katie,
Jason & Jonathan

Ricky Frith

II Timothy 1:7
For God did not give us a Spirit of fear, but of love, of power and of a sound mind.
With gratitude and love,
Mom and Dad & brothers

2002 Spring Supplement

Day of Prayer & Service

April 4, 2002

At least once a year, the students and faculty at Northwestern College take a day off of classes and spread out into the community to help others. For the sake of organization, students are encouraged to join their department but it is always okay to get a group of friends together and join a department for the day. Some of the ministries and organizations served this year include: Union Gospel Mission and Salvation Army, Jordan New Life Community Church, Augustana Lutheran Church, Inner City Church of Minneapolis and the Ronald McDonald House.

While the service aspect is important, what really makes the day special for many is the strong emphasis on prayer. A couple of hours are taken in the morning to spend in corporate and small group prayer before getting on the buses and starting the various service projects. The prayer services held in Maranatha and around campus help to encourage students not only for the days' activities but also to persevere through the last weeks of the spring semester.

For many of the students, the Day of Prayer and Service is a great time to get together with old friends and to make some new acquaintances.

"The Day of Prayer and Service is a chance to get out and help other people that you usually wouldn't meet every day."

Junior Stephanie Leaman

Spring Variety Show

SPRING PLAY

"Civilizations are judged by how they treat their most helpless of citizens.
I am that citizen."

Left (top to bottom): Surprise, Surprise!!

The whole gang throws a "surprise" farewell party for Jack. Arnold provided the hand puppets as a "cool" party favor.

What Do You Think?

Barry seeks the advice of his deaf neighbor, Mrs. Fremus, on two very important topics, golf and his Dad. Barry left their sessions much more relieved than when he came.

Gotcha!!

Mistaking the the next-door neighbor's hamster for a rat, Norman, Lucien, and Arnold chase Mrs. Warren's hamster.

Right (top to bottom): Not Your Typical Lesson.

Barry tries to give a lesson to Mr. Hedges, but Mr. Hedges is unsatisfied. What did he expect when lessons were only two for twenty-five cents?

See My Tie.

Lucien and Jack appear before a Senate committee, appealing for Lucien's rights to continue living in his apartment. He displayed his Spiderman tie for the senators.

Dance With Me?

At one of the dance parties, Norman makes his way over to ask Sheila for a dance and offer an invitation to see his pad.

Arnold picks up some items at the grocery store including nine boxes of Wheaties, several heads of lettuce and a bag of charcoal.

Above:

Long Time No See

Barry panics when he hears about his father's upcoming visit. He couldn't even speak when Mr. Klemper arrived.

Above Left:

More To The Story

Jack, the social worker, describes the life of the four mentally challenged men and their dependence on him.

Spring Break 2002 Missions Trips

Instead of going home or vacationing over Spring Break, many Northwestern students choose to step out of their comfort zones and make a difference in the world by going on missions trips. This year, Northwestern College sent out ten teams (with a total of 150 students) to many different places on the globe: Ensenada, Haiti, New York City, San Francisco, San Diego, Rio Bravo, Tijuana, Panama City Beach, Guatemala, and China.

(from top to bottom) Where's the snow?

The team that went to Panama City Beach, Florida, spent the week on the beach witnessing to other college students on their spring break trips. The Northwestern students worked with Campus Crusade for Christ, and the organization set up fun activities on the beach, such as basketball games, to attract people.

Sister Sledge:

Swinging a mean sledge hammer, resident director Amy VanDerWerf helps clear some of the debris from a wall that fell during her team's stay in Tijuana.

No, you can't take him home:

Senior Jason Riebe gives a piggy-back ride to one of the cute kids he met down in Ensenada, Mexico.

When in Rome (or China)...

Not only does God work in your life when you go on a missions trip, you also get to experience a different culture. Here, the China team gets to eat some truly authentic Chinese food.

Way Up High (left):

Befriending a child in Tijuana, Mexico, is sophomore Aaron Gunderson. The kids there started calling Aaron "Comos Dias" because of his interesting use of the Spanish language.

Don't Let Student Development Know! (below):

The team that went to China worked with Campus Crusade for Christ, ministering to Chinese college students. Here, a few North-western students take time to teach some girls how to dance.

The "spiritual gift" of painting (above):

Trying to get more paint on the walls than on herself is freshman Kayla Koep, who went on the San Diego trip. Her team spent the week remodeling a church sanctuary and helping at an after-school program for kids.

That is a whole lot of butter (above):

One of the ways the San Francisco team ministered was by having a "love feast" for some of the homeless. The team served food, put on dramas, and just generally showed Christ's love to the people. Sophomore Anna-Lena Johnson and junior Michelle Miller were in charge of buttering the bread for the meal.

Why Should NWC Students Go on Spring Break Missions Trips?

"It really opens up your eyes to what else is out there."

-Lindsay Davis, sophomore Guatemala team

"When you go on a missions trip, you are making yourself available to let God use you and touch you in a way that only He can. Missions trips allow you to show Jesus' love to other people."

-Becky Elmstrand, freshman Ensenada team

"These trips are a great way to grow spiritually, because you are actively engaging in evangelism and just walking out the love and life of Christ."

-Emily Carlson, sophomore San Francisco team

"You get a better perspective on the rest of the world, and the trip changes your life forever!"

-Kristin Pugh, sophomore China team

"I once had a teacher tell us, 'Missions is at the heart of God.' When we go on trips like this, we get to be participants in God's pursuit of other people."

-Kayla Koep, freshman San Diego team

Right:

Twin City Skyline.

Northwestern students and faculty board the Anson and Betsy Northrup party barge for Spring Banquet 2002. The evening included dinner, a concert featuring Smalltown Poets, and a cruise along the Mississippi. Despite the winter-like weather, getting stuck at the landing because of the wind, and being a little crowded (80 extra tickets were accidentally printed), the night was enjoyable--and memorable.

The windblown look.

"Burr," shivers freshman Jacinta Schelonka (middle) as the cold wind rips at her hair when she passes between the two boats. Freshman Heidi Harmon (right) jittered, "It's a little brisky." That's no exaggeration! Freshman Ashlee Nuest (left) had the right idea--she kept her coat on!

Left: Cutest couple on campus.

"I feel like I'm on the Titanic," laughs sophomore Nathan Johnson. "What a memorable night," sophomore Lydia Montzka remarked. "Whoever organized all this did a great job!"

Bottom: April showers bring May snow storms?

Senior Ben Selness shelters junior Emily Buchner, senior Stacey Gullifer, and junior Mandy Ploekelman from the sleet as they wait to board the riverboat. "So much for 'Spring' Banquet," said Stacey. "It's more like winter carnival."

Help yourself.

Over 400 Northwestern students pigged out on this scrumptious buffet featuring BBQ ribs and chicken, baked potatoes, Caesar salad, rolls, and honey-cooked carrots. Dessert included an assortment of delicious bars.
